Planning, Building and Evaluating educational programs for nurses in Jordan. This includes learning objectives, material content, teaching strategies. Research, Nursing theory courses taken were applied to real case studies present in the university hospital and other healthcare institutions. In addition to courses and case studies, I made contribution to ongoing research with the Supervising Professor. This was taken in addition to a full-time Nursing job and so many of the theories and knowledge was applied directly into the field.
University of Salford	Manchester, UK
PhD, Adult Health Nursing:	Jan 2007 - April 2011
A research study was conducted on nurses' experience caring for men with sexual dysfunction in Jordan. It was a case study and included interviews with both patients and nurses in each selected site in the study. A major challenge was the cultural barriers with regards to men's sexual health in Jordan. In the study, nurses were asked about how they usually initiate discussion with patients. Similarly, patients were asked how they initiate discussions with nurses. It was a new perspective for nurses in Jordan on how to deal with sensitive problems in a culture like Jordan.
